MEMORIAL DAY.

To-day the survivors of the American civil war have gathered at thousands of graveyards to pay honor to the dead defenders of the Union. With them, in the act of reverence, have been millions of patriotic men and women of the new and the risen as well as of the old and the doomed generations; and the sympathies of these have overrun all boundaries of creed and party, of sectional demarcation and of envenomed oceans. In the South as well as in the North, in far Alaska and Hawaii, "honor to whom honor is due" has been the watchword of the hour and day; and upon more than a million mounds have been placed with tenderest hands the flowers of red and white and blue—the roses of hope, the lilies of peace, the violets of affectionate remembrance.

As the years go by and the services of Memorial Day draw heart towards heart on both sides of Mason and Dixon's line, the bitterness and hate left by the Civil war fade away and are lost in a large charity for those who bravely fought under either flag of the stupendous conflict. It will not be long before all the people shall feel becoming pride in the great deeds done by the men who wore the gray as well as the blue upon so many stricken fields. So it has been with all nations. No Englishman looks back with shame or ill-feeling to the deeds of those who fell at Marston Moor or Naseby upon either side of the ancient, fierce contention. He knows that those battles resulted for the best good of the nation and even the children of the defeated would not have had them turn out differently. The time will surely come when Americans, South as well as North, and North as well as South, will treasure the memory of Gettysburg and Appomattox and of Bull Run and Fredericksburg as of events which Providence guided and overruled to the betterment of all and to the lasting good of the human race.

"To-day," as a poet said in plaintive prose, "the flowers will raise their beautiful eyes from the grassy graves of our soldiery. It will be the same look, whether the breast which lay beneath was covered in life by the blue or the gray, whether the face was white or black, whether the soul was brave or cowardly. And so the fair hands which place them there will show equal tenderness to all. The lesson taught is as old as death—that time is the subduer of grief, the assuager of passion."

COMMENTING upon some recent utterances of the Star, the San Francisco Chronicle says that "if the Annexationist party deems itself strong enough to support the Provisional Government until after the Presidential election of 1896, it must have more sources of strength than it has been credited with by those who are opposed to it. There are, it is believed, evidences in the Hawaiian Islands of a growth of the Annexation sentiment and of the concurrence of many who have heretofore been neutral, or at least not disposed actively to favor Annexation."

The Chronicle notes the evident failure of the Refinery King's interfering schemes and adds:

"The whole matter would be simplified if President Cleveland would make known his views on the subject of annexation. He withdrew the treaty from the Senate, but substituted no other for it, and it is not known that he has ever made an authoritative statement as to what he desires. Possibly the country may hear from him now that Blount's report has been received at Washington. It is clearly his duty to relieve this country and Hawaii from the suspense which now hangs over the question of annexation."

The malcontents were probably wise in giving up their proposed meeting to-night, though the excuse made, namely, that the news from Washington is encouraging, is rather trying on the risibles. If the soreheads really knew all that is going they would get on their life preservers. Like Talmage's "Ship of Sin," the monarchy is plunging along with sails of lead and hull of brass and oars of iron, with the wrath of God for a gale and hell for its nearest port.

EX-MARSHAL Wilson presumes to attack the record and character of Minister Stevens in a two column article which the Examiner is absurd enough to print. Who wrote the screech for Wilson isn't known, though from its character and general inaccuracy he might have been Nordhoff.

Chairman Bolte, from the Military Affairs Committee, reported favorably on the request from Colonel Soper for military supplies, as read in the last meeting.

The Secretary read for the first time an act relating to stamp duties, amending the old law, which was drafted by the Judiciary Committee as a substitute for an act of the same nature introduced some time ago by Councilman Brown.

Attorney-General Smith advocated the passage of the original bill that there be no possible loss in revenue.

"There has been an income on an average of $45,000 a year for some years past from this source," said Mr. Smith, "and it has been but little burden to the community. On the theory that we should not go into unnecessary legislation we should not disturb the present law on this subject. It is an injustice to the community for large incorporated stock companies to escape this tax. It brings in a substantial revenue to this country. It only amounts to one fifth of one per cent, and it falls upon those who can afford to pay it. It is an eminently fair tax and we should not change it; there will be no tax of stock unless there is a change of ownership in it."

The motion prevailed to postpone the stamp act as proposed by Councilman Allen and the act providing that officers of corporations shall affix stamps of the value of twenty cents for each one hundred dollars or fraction thereof of the par value of the shares of stock represented or certified by such certificate.

The bill passed to second reading.

Minister Porter tendered his resignation as Minister of Finance and said he would like to have it acted on immediately, as he wished to get away on the Gaelic this afternoon, and that his successor be appointed, as he had some unfinished business to consult him about. He paid a high compliment to the harmonious working of the Councils, and said that he had never met such a congenial lot of men.

Attorney-General Smith moved the acceptance of the resignation; that he knew under what conditions Mr. Porter had accepted the position; that we had thanks for his services and regret at his withdrawal.

The resignation was accepted.

Tenney nominated Mr. Damon for the position, who was unanimously elected, and at 2:15 o'clock the Council went into Executive session.

Hood's Cures.
In saying that Hood's Sarsaparilla cures, its proprietors make no idle or extravagant claim. Statements from thousands of reliable people of what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for them, conclusively prove the fact—HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA CURES.

Hood's Pills are especially upon the liver, causing it from torpidity to its natural duties, cure constipation and assist digestion.

Spreckels Denies It.
Claus Spreckels denies the report of the engagement of his daughter to Charles M. Shortridge and he does not lack his usual positiveness in the disclaimer either.

POOR OLD ALLIANCE.

Her Ineffectual Efforts to Leave San Francisco.

The ratty old Alliance made a desperate but futile attempt to get out of San Francisco harbor, a few days ago, on her way to Nicaragua. First two boiler heads were blown off, then the water gauges got out of order, then the rudder began to wobble and had to be fixed, then the engine, which was being run by the extra boilers, played out, and finally the old craft sprung leak in the passage way abaft the ward room.

The pumps were started and she went back to Mare Island for repairs. "It's a pity to waste so much good material," remarked one of the sailors. "The machinery and boilers would make great nails, and there's wood enough for thousands of shingles in the hull."
